'Time for government to act as the city has over air pollution'

By Owen Hughes

OXFORD City Council has welcomed a High Court decision to force the government to control levels of air pollution in 10 towns and cities across the UK.

This judge's ruling means local authorities must investigate and identify measures to tackle the excessive levels of pollution as soon as possible. Parts of Oxford city centre were found to have exceeded nitrogen dioxide levels, meaning that monthly average levels dropped by as much as 10 per cent over the last decade.

Councillor John Tanner, the council's board member for a Green and Green Oxford, said: "We are very pleased with the judgement."

"We used the government's failure to tackle the public health emergency and now it's ours. They took no action at all - like we are already doing."

Environment Minister Thomas Copley said Oxford West and Abingdon MP Lyle Moran said he would be developing a local plan to improve air quality. City Council will also have to set 2015 levels as targets, which legal limits are likely to be met by 2015.

Mr Moran said: "It is crucial that the Government has brought forward money opposing this will create value."

Greenpeace used eye-catching graphics to get the message about pollution levels in St Aldates and High Street across last month, warning there must be done to tackle the problem in the city.

She said: "It reflects that our government's approach to tackling the air pollution crisis is far from sufficient, particularly in areas which are severely affected by dirty roads such as Oxford."

"I think that, after three years in the High Court, the government will finally get the message and properly support local authorities such as Lyle Moran. I think that, after three years in the High Court, the government will finally get the message."

Go green and save money on energy bills

"LCCN is making Oxford a green energy city, and save money on bills."

"That is the message from a company launched this month using city residents to create a greener energy future."

According to Oxford City Council, the company will save every £100 a year by switching to the cheapest green tariff.

The website of community energy will also help to reduce bills for greater living, but developed a website on people can compare the price of different renewable tariffs.

According to OXCC, more than 100 people in the city are "only a few minutes away from climate change, yet only a 10 per cent of homes for their electricity from a green supplier."

Customers will also be able to compare the price of different renewable tariffs. The website, launched on Monday, can be found at lccn.oxfordcity.gov.uk company.

Using people to meet the new website LCCN also aims to help. "We want Oxford to be the place where more people use green energy than anywhere else."

LCCN said its per cent of the community will go back into the community, including renewable energy projects.

Poundland killer made threats to a neighbour

Inquest hears of danger before store stabbing

By Owen Hughes

AN Abingdon killer who stabbed a father of two to death in his home a Poundland store had previously threatened to murder his neighbour, an inquest heard.

Sir Phil Dorman told Oxford Coroner's Court that Trevor Joyce, 40, of Poundland Close, was admitted and discharged from a mental health centre after pleading to threatening a neighbour's life.

The inquest heard that Joyce who posted a drink three through his neighbour's door, had been persuaded that if they had been at home he knocked on their door, he would have killed them.

Joyce was arrested four times in one week just two months before the attack, before he was voluntarily admitted to a Littlemore Mental Health Centre.

He was allowed to leave on October 30 2013 and just two weeks later Joyce grabbed a knife from the shelf in the window Poundland store on the shopping precinct and stabbed Justin Drachowski, a 41 year-old son of a doctor.

threatened or argued. More than 40 people are due to give evidence in the two-week long inquest, which will examine the treatment given to Joyce who has been diagnosed with schizophrenia. Mr Allen strongly fought for the inquest and in the months following his husband's death launched an online campaign for justice centred over the role of knives in shops.

More than 1,000 people signed the petition to Prime Minister Theresa May, leading to a royal grant agreeing to wider storage of knives in shops including Poundland.

In March 2014 Matthew Tyson, Hampshire Anti Stabbing Unit lead also agreed to change the way they sell knives, alongside John Lewis, Sainsbury's and Asda. Mr Allen said at the time: "I cannot say that the sales are down because I wish so very much that it had never happened and that Justin was with me and our lives would be as the only thing that has brought me peace."

Joyce had been arrested under the Mental Health Act on three occasions since 2007.

More people need to use food banks

MEP's report reveals 20% rise

By George Walsh

FOODBANK usage in Southampton has risen by almost 30 per cent over the last four years, according to a new report.

The research, published on Friday, details the extent to which people have to rely on emergency food parcels.

According to Keith Taylor MEP, foodbank dependency has risen by more than 15 per cent since his published his first report in 2003.

He puts the increase down to low pay and welfare cuts "pushing more people into food poverty".

"My report reveals a shameful side of the British economy that is deliberately hidden from view by the government," Mr Taylor said.

"As wages and benefits stagnate, as welfare cuts mean people are left with no welfare cuts and the thousands of job losses, it is clear there is little hope that situation will improve under the current administration."

He added: "Across the UK, foodbank use has increased by almost 30 per cent

Use of food banks has risen in Southampton in recent years according to Keith Taylor MEP with even numbers being forced to rely on emergency food parcels as the reality of Britain's record on work poverty levels set home."

The government does not collect data on how many people use food banks.

A foodbank was set up last year at a primary school in Prime Minister Avenue, May's constituency of Southampton.

A £10.25 crane has sprung up at Wokingham railway station as rebuilding work on the historic structure got under way in January.

A similar crane strategy is being installed following a similar £200,000 restoration grant from the Railway Heritage Trust.

The strategy was at place for more than 10 years at Wokingham railway station but was removed as part of improvement works in October 2011. The following project has taken more than two years to establish the amount of work required to rebuild the historic structure in Wokingham and Chichester.

Work is expected to be completed in early 2015.

The railway's sand raising days are over the Easter Weekend, with heritage trains running on March 16 and April 1 and 2.

The Chichester and Wokingham Railway is organising the Mayor's Railway Show which is taking place in Wokingham Town Hall on April 20. Anyone wanting to help on the day, or any other projects, is

Connor Sparrowhawk death: medical tribunal rules on doctor's fitness to practice

Doctor's apology for 'personal failings'

By George Walsh

A DOCTOR, responsible for the death of Connor Sparrowhawk, has finally apologised to his mother, five years after the 16-year-old died as a result while negligently under close supervision.

The Medical Practitioners Tribunal Service (MPTS) last week decided that Dr Valerie Murphy's fitness to practice was impaired.

She was responsible for 20 failings before Connor's death and has been suspended for a year.

Connor had epilepsy and became ill a few hours before a seizure at the now-closed Salford Health NHS Foundation Trust's Stoke House in Worsley.

Dr Murphy failed to remember the implications of allowing him to have a bath on his own with staff checking every 15 minutes, as well as failing to make any risk assessments.

Up to this point there had been an absence of remorse but, at the tribunal, Dr Murphy accepted all the failings she submitted and apologised to Ben Ryan, Connor's mum.

She said: "Words cannot express the remorse I feel at how my failings have contributed to the death of Connor. I am sorry that I did not work to meet with Connor at earlier and her family and that she has let them believe that I did not care."

"Not being further from the truth, I have made apologies but this again, that making them now, they appear general and not related to my failings for my personal failings."

"I would like to set out in as succinct terms, that I apologise for my own personal failing and the role those had on the death of Connor."

She added: "I really did value my eye off the ball in this case."

The MPTS said Dr Murphy's suspension would give the doctor time to reflect on her misconduct and her case would be reviewed before coming to a final decision.

Connor's death on July 4, 2011 led to the discovery that Salford Health had not properly investigated 270 suspected deaths in its care.

In September the first general inquiry is launching, headed and chaired by Sir John Mann, a senior judge in the case, it will be reviewed at Oxford Crown Court on March 26 and 28.

Mum hits out at 11th hour remorse

It is five years since the July 4th Connor Sparrowhawk was left to sleep by people who should have been caring for him.

His mum, Ben Ryan, posted published a harrowing book last year as part of her long struggle for justice in his name.

Part of that struggle has been fighting for accountability for what happened to her son.

In a posthumous statement his Ryan said: "Our beautiful son died a terrible death nearly five years ago now."

"Salford Health NHS Foundation Trust closed not to refer Valerie Murphy, Connor's responsible clinician, to the General Medical Council (GMC) for investigation."

"Instead they offered his name to the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC). We had to refer her ourselves."

"Over the past four years, Valerie Murphy has repeatedly failed to show any remorse and has failed to apologise."

"She has allowed her legal counsel to on her occasion to suggest me to meet Connor."

memorandum ensuring I have someone responsible for his death. At the same time, having also apologised to the tribunal for Connor's death."

"The discipline has been unacceptably formal and not unusual. Families whose loved ones die whilst care are normally not summarised by their profession."

She added on Twitter that the "truly extraordinary" apology was "common at the 11th hour."

Although Dr Murphy is barred from practising in the UK for 12 months, it does not prevent her from working in Clark where she is registered with the Irish Medical Council.

HOW EQUITY RELEASE HELPED THIS FAMILY HELP THEIR LOVED ONES

Many parents would dearly love to help their children onto the housing ladder, but many may be concerned as to how they could afford to make a lasting contribution.

This was the dilemma that faced the Flower family in Dorsetshire. Their eldest daughter was desperate to make a move onto the property ladder. Having recently married, she was looking for a home of her own in which to settle down and start a family, but she simply couldn't afford the deposit. "We hated knowing our daughter was stuck in a rental property with no real prospect of getting into a home of her own in the current market."

As over-55 UK homeowners however, Mr and Mrs Flower realised that there was a way they could help. By releasing a portion of the equity in their property with a drawdown Lifetime Mortgage, they could provide their daughter with a tax-free cash lumpsum to contribute towards her deposit, and they would also have future access to their equity as and when they needed it.

"We heard about Lifetime mortgages, and how they could be used to help your loved ones, from a colleague. We looked into it, and our advisor found us a plan that met our needs perfectly. We have been able to contribute to our daughter's first steps on the property ladder, and we can take comfort in knowing that whatever entry access to a significant cash reserve to face any problems in the future – or, if we want, the money to pay for that dream holiday."

With a lifetime mortgage, the Flowers are guaranteed to retain full ownership of their property until they both pass away, or both enter long term care. By choosing a mortgage provided by an Equity Release Council approved provider, they can also take comfort in knowing that they will never owe more than the value of their home. One thing's worth bearing in mind that accessing some of your property wealth today in the form of a lifetime mortgage may reduce the value of your estate and could affect your entitlement to means tested state benefits.

"We are also pleased that our drawdown plan allows us to retain some control over our interest – we only paid it on the money we withdrew. This helps us remain in control of our finances."

With more than 80 bespoke plans available, why not see if your home could be the secret to helping your family achieve its dreams today?

Could you take advantage of your property wealth? Call Andy Pike today on 01865 378718 to find out more.

Professional, friendly service and sound financial advice

"Andy Pike took the time to discuss my needs, offer impartial advice and explain the different options available to me. He explained Lifetime mortgage policies suitable to my situation and provided all that I needed to make an informed decision. There was no hint of hard selling, or push at all and I got back to him when I was ready to move forward. He was very professional, but approachable and friendly. Although we only met once, it was easy to make contact with Andy by phone, email or text and he always responded quickly to my queries or concerns. Although there was some delay due to the lender's procedures, Andy helped push things through to completion and I am delighted to have the money ready for my building project". Highly complex work continues PCIEA Mike, the chief inspector of construction at the HSE, has described the investigation into the poorly situated collapse as 'unique and highly complex'.

On-site recovery continues and evidence has been gathered from builders, those and two. Evidence is still being collected from builders, those and two.

More than 1,000 statements have been taken from witnesses so far and a number of people have been interviewed under oath, with each interview taking hours at a time.

The four bedrooms weighed around 15,000 tonnes each and so far evidence has been gathered from around 50,000 tonnes of that material, TWP said they are analysing more than 1,000 exhibits.

Mr Baker said the authorities are working 'as fast as they can' to get to the truth but the families.

He added: "The investigation will also find out if any criminal offences have been committed. The incident in Odstock was unique and the investigation is highly complex, both in scale and nature and therefore will take time to conclude."

A spokesperson from TWP added: "We are committed to carrying out the evidence recovery work and the clean-up work as soon as possible but the police and will carry on their investigation and the full site can be returned to 2016 standard."

Family flees toaster fire

A Oxford household had to evacuate after a toaster fire broke out in a living room.

Residents of a house in East Oxford fled after their toaster caught fire and threatened to take hold of the kitchen.

The incident happened on February 12.

The fire started around the time with a fire spreading from the back of the property.

The house was extinguished using high pressure hose reels, and damage was contained to the kitchen.

Incident commander crew manager Richard Welling, of South Fire Station, said: "The occupants of the property were alerted by the sound of smoke and the activation of the smoke detectors. They managed to close the kitchen door to contain the spread and use the door to the rest of the property and made their way safely out of the property before calling the fire service."

"I would also like to remind the public to ensure that you have working smoke alarms in place to alert you early and to have cooking equipment

Charity of the year 2018 – Heien & Douglas House

Great Wall of China trek to help 'second family'

By George Walsh

WALKING the spectacular Great Wall of China is a bucket list classic – but one unlikely trekker will walk a later stretch for very different reasons.

Napoli's Miguel, 35, of the Heien & Douglas House's Great Wall of China Trek to January at the Great Wall of China, scheduled to start next year 12.

The 31-year-old wants to give something back to our charity of the year which saved his brother from pain right now he is.

He was born five weeks prematurely with a rare, life-threatening condition called Sickle Cell Anemia, which causes bone deformity.

Heien & Douglas House and the charity still help the family including Napoli's parents and his brother with fundraising, support groups and activity days six years after his death.

"I really want to make sure we are able to go back to Heien & Douglas House and enjoy being there," Napoli said.

"I thought what better way than to give a gift to the charity and walk the Great Wall of China," he said. "I can picture Heien & Douglas House laughing at the thought of me standing back there looking like a dog."

He added, "Heien & Douglas House has been the best thing that has happened to me and I am so happy about it."

"Heien & Douglas House was my second family and I am so happy about it."

At the time of the 2004 election, the Bush administration was widely expected to appoint a conservative to the post of U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. However, the administration's choice, Richard L. Armitage, was a moderate Republican who had served as U.S. ambassador to the United Kingdom and as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Armitage's appointment was seen as a sign of the administration's commitment to a more balanced and pragmatic approach to international relations.

Major milestone for retirement builder.... as Wantage development hits 50% sold out

RETIREMENT Retirement has uncovered a hot market in the retirement housing sector, with 50 per cent of its new retirement apartments in Wantage.

The development opened in November and sales have been encouraging with over 20 apart-ments sold to date, making it one of the company's fastest selling developments.

Over 100 of top end retirement apartments were sold in the opening month when the company opened the doors to the public and the company has reported another two sales in January.

The development, built on the former magistrates court and Police station on Church Street, comprises 10 one and two bedroom retirement apartments. The company has been attracting a number of interested buyers from the local area.

Retirement Retirement's sales director Mark Smith said: "It's a very encouraging start. We are now over 50 per cent sold out and have good interest on a number of apartments. It's an exciting time for potential buyers during this phase of sale of retirement and central location in Wantage."

Mark added: "There is very strong interest in the Wantage area for good quality retirement apartments. Our sales message is clear - come and view some very smart, spacious, energy efficient flats while there's good availability."

Chris Watson, marketing director at Retirement Retirement, said: "It is a fantastic lifestyle people are looking for that is perfect. Only a few hundred steps to the market square you have superb views to the very best Wantage offers on your doorstep."

Retirement Retirement claims its responding to market demand with developments which offer a more modern retirement life.

The retirement properties will provide an exceptional standard of independent living for those remaining independent from a larger family home.

The spacious one and two bedroom apartments are impressively finished with contemporary interior, which means they have access to an ensuite, dressing room and landscaped gardens.

Retirement Retirement has a distinguished history; the company was founded by RICH Prince of Wales to build a landmark collection of retirement apartments in the heart of Farnborough, Hampshire.

Following a demand for luxury retirement housing, Retirement Retirement design, build and manage luxury retirement developments, with communal areas externally cleaned and maintained to ensure a level of comfort that one would expect at a star hotel.

The company offers a number of added owner benefits and benefits, and Retirement Retirement's 24-hour 24-hour service - which is offered to all owners at no extra cost - has proven particularly popular. This bespoke service includes a dedicated 24-hour 24-hour service, who can offer advice and assistance with everything, the planning and setting up of their new home, and retirement life.
